（会話文）

Rebecca: Hi, Takashi. Did you watch the baseball game on TV last night?

Takashi: On TV? No, but I enjoyed watching it at the ballpark.

Rebecca: Really? I haven't watched any baseball games at ballparks in Japan. Do you often go to the ballpark to watch baseball games?

Takashi: Yes. I often go there with my father. He likes baseball very much. He was a baseball player in high school.

Rebecca: Oh, was he? Baseball is a national sport in America. I often went to baseball games with my family at the ballpark near my house in America.

Takashi: Sounds nice. Do you know the national sport of Japan?

Rebecca: Well, is it sumo?

Takashi: That's right. Sumo has a long history and it has been very popular in Japan. It's exciting to see one sumo wrestler throwing the other. And today, there are a lot of sumo wrestlers who come from abroad. So now there are a lot of sumo fans in many countries.

Rebecca: I see. Now I want to see sumo.

Takashi: Oh, now we can see it in Nagoya. My father has three tickets for Nagoya-basho. We will go to see sumo next Saturday. Why don't you join us?

Rebecca: Really? I'd love to.

Takashi: All right. Please come to my house at eleven o'clock in the morning. We will go to Nagoya-basho by subway. Is that OK?

Rebecca: Eleven o'clock? It's too early.

Takashi: Not too early. Sumo starts at 8:30 on that day. In the morning, we can see a lot of young sumo wrestlers fighting hard to become yokozuna. In addition, there are a lot of shops that sell nice things. We want to have enough time to enjoy everything about sumo!
