Akira: Hi, Grace. I want to play "What Am I?" if you have time now.

Grace: Do you mean the game we played during the English class in the fifth period?

Akira: Yes. I enjoyed the game, but we had only a few minutes to play it.

Grace: OK. I'll start. I am an animal. I live on land. What am I?

Akira: Let's see. Do you live with people?

Grace: No, I don't. But you can see me in a zoo. I'm very popular.

Akira: How long do you live?

Grace: In nature, I live for about seventy years. And in a zoo, about forty years.

Akira: OK. Are you big or small?

Grace: I'm huge. I'm about four meters tall. What am I?

Akira: It's still difficult for me to guess the answer. Give me more information.

Grace: Well, I have a long nose.

Akira: I got it. You're an elephant, aren't you?

Grace: Yes, I am. I'm an elephant. Good job.

Akira: Thank you. You know a lot about elephants. I want you to tell me more.

Grace: Sure. Can you answer this question? How do they communicate with each other?

Akira: Well, I have seen a TV program about it. In the TV program, some baby elephants were using their noses to show their love or friendship.

Grace: That's right. And they have another way of communication. They make a low sound we can't hear. Some scientists say this sound goes for ten kilometers.

Akira: Ten kilometers? Wow, that's very far.
